The T-Mobile/Sprint merger will create thousands of new American jobs from Day One. New T-Mobile commits to have more U.S. employees on payroll than the prior standalone companies do now.

- New T-Mobile will have 3,625 more direct full-time employees in year one (2019) than the two standalone companies would have absent the merger. In year three (2021), the merger will have created 5,045 more full-time jobs at New T-Mobile.
  - When accounting for the indirect jobs created by this merger (positions created by vendors or others in the supply chain), the total increases to 11,840 new jobs in year one (2019).

- Nearly $40B in Network Investment over 3 years to rapidly build our nationwide 5G network and expand into new businesses (enterprise, in-home broadband and IoT) will create jobs, in local communities.

- 12,000+ Jobs in Rural Areas by 2021. New T-Mobile plans to open at least 600 new retail stores and up to five new call centers, contributing to 12,000+ new jobs to New T-Mobile and other third parties supporting the New T-Mobile brand, mostly to rural areas (by 2021) as a direct result of the merger, including approximately:
  - 5,000 to staff our 600 new retail locations, and
  - 5,600 to support our five new customer experience centers.

- Thousands More U.S. Care Jobs. New T-Mobile also expects to substantially increase its U.S. customer care workforce to ensure T-Mobile’s industry-leading standard. Team-based Un-carrier customer service system will expand to cover all legacy Sprint subscribers and all customers won from competitors.
  - These centers will use the Team of Experts (TEX) customer care model, and directly employ and offer career opportunities for approximately 5,600 professionals (by 2021).
  - T-Mobile’s TEX care model requires more employees than Sprint’s care model. As New T-Mobile extends the labor-intensive care model to Sprint’s customers, we’ll base those new jobs in the United States.
  - In 2024, New T-Mobile will employ 7,500+ more customer care employees than the standalone companies would have.

- Strong Track Record. New T-Mobile can create jobs because T-Mobile has done it before. Since T-Mobile acquired MetroPCS, employees and contractors supporting the MetroPCS brand has nearly tripled.
  - T-Mobile achieved these results by doubling MetroPCS’s customer base and door count, and expanding to serve five times as many markets.

- Consistent Job Growth. T-Mobile has a consistent track record of job growth and added approximately 27,000 jobs supporting the brand in 2017. T-Mobile’s employment growth has been consistent across all aspects of the business.

- More Jobs in the Economy. New T-Mobile’s increased investment and rapid growth also will stimulate tens of thousands of additional jobs throughout the U.S. economy.
  - NERA Economic Consulting’s has conservatively estimated the merger will add 33,720 annual jobs to the U.S. economy from 2019-2023.
    - Economists measure employment in terms of “job-years” to reflect changing employment conditions.
    - One job for one year is one job-year. If that job continues for another year, the employment effect is considered to be two job-years.
    - NERA Economic Consulting predicted the merger will result in 168,600 job-years in the 5 years following merger or an annual average of 33,720 jobs over the 5-year period 2019-2023.
  - Accenture recently estimated that the deployment of 5G would stimulate $275 billion in investment, create millions of new jobs and result in $500 billion in economic growth.
  - New T-Mobile will be a critical part of the engine driving job growth and economic value throughout the mobile ecosystem during 5G deployment and beyond.
